Judge grants injunction against 'Broderick Boys'

Ruling imposes restrictions on alleged gang members inside a three-square mile part of northern West Sac

After five months of trial that ended in December, Yolo County Superior Court Judge Kathleen White last week issued a "gang injunction" against the Broderick Boys gang in northern West Sacramento.

Some community members had argued against the need for a gang injunction.

Judge White said that she "found the testimony of the victims and percipient witnesses to the crimes during the trial particularly credible and compelling."

And while she also found credible the testimony by opponents of the injunction that West Sacramento's north area was "a community with strong family ties," she found it "less credible" when they testified "as to the nonexistence of the Broderick Boys gang."

The injunction affects a zone bounded by Harbor Boulevard on the west, the river on the north, and by US 50, Business 80 and the Tower Bridge approach to the south. Excluded from the zone is the "Rivers" partially-gated subdivision.

Those determined to be gang members are prevented from a number of activities — some of which they would otherwise be entitled to under Constitutional protection.

They're prohibited from associating with each other in public (with exceptions such as attending school or church) or from being on public property between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. They also face enhanced penalties for violations such as trespassing, graffiti or drugs or weapons charges.

The Broderick Boys is a Latino-affiliated gang. It's often symbolized in graffiti with the "BRK" abbreviation for "Broderick," or by the Roman numerals "IV." That number -- 14 -- represents the 14th letter of the alphabet, "n." It stands for "norteno" ("northern"). "Norteno" is regional affiliation of the gang.

The injunction was sought by Yolo County District Attorney Jeff Reisig with the cooperation of the West Sacramento City Council and the city police.

Tunes on the riverfront

The band "Garrat Wilkin and the Whiskey Ducks" opened up this summer's season of the River Walk Concert Series on the riverfront near the ziggurat building and Tower Bridge. The free concerts are offered at 5:30 p.m. each Tuesday through July. Next Tuesday the guest is "Riff Raff," a tribute band for "AC/DC." For more information about the concerts, visit www.westsacfun.org.

Fireworks booths open on Tuesday

For the first time, 'safe and sane' fireworks will be legal for 4th of July

Members of the Sactown Heroes youth service group, who will partner with the Bryte & Broderick Community Action Group (BBCAN) to sell fireworks as a fundraiser

By Steve Marschke

For the first time in the city's 24-year history, it will be legal this year to use at least some kinds of fireworks during the Independence Day holiday.

A new city law makes "safe and sane" fireworks (those bearing the seal of approval from the California Fire Marshal) legal for use from noon on June 28 through noon on July 6. The city also held a lottery to issue permits to schools, churches and nonprofit groups that wished to sell fireworks.

About 40 groups applied for one of the permits. The River City Apostolic Church on Merkley Avenue was one of the eight winners.

Reports the church's Paula Robbins:

"I had our application anointed with oil! We took it to the church and had the minister pray over it. And we won!"

Another winner was a support group for the Interna

'Jaws of Life'

The West Sacramento Fire Department hosted an open house at fire station 44 on Fremont Street on June 11.

Hundreds visited.

Firefighters demonstrated the 'jaws of life' on an overturned car, Tony's Fine Foods gave away free hot dogs, and local stores donated 11 bicycles which were given away to kids who entered a raffle.

Rockin' for the local parks

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A city's parks and recreation department takes more than its share of budget hits when the financial chips are down. But you have a chance to enjoy some tunes and help your parks department at the same time, this Saturday evening in the city's new "Black Box" theater.

"Mike McGowan and the Mighty Delta Roadmasters" and special guest Lew Fratis will pay a call to the Black Box for a show beginning at 7:30 p.m.

"We're doing the show for two reasons," said McGowan, drummer for the band and the city's current county supervisor. "One is I'm dying to get my band into that new theater, which is very cool. And we're doing a fundraiser for the parks and recreation department. We've already raised about $2,500 in sponsorships for the show. They need it – we thought of doing this a while back when the parks department was thinking of cutting the 'Harmony on the River' concerts (a weekly summer concert series at River Walk Park)."

On lead vocals for the band is Cindy Tuttle – who, like McGowan, is a former mayor of West Sacramento.

"The band is pretty much West Sacramentans," he said. "Steve Suchil, the lead guitar player, lives in West Sac. Both Cindy and Donn Tuttle play with us and live here. Our sax player, Danny Sandoval, lives here too. And I've been around since dirt. I tout myself as the world's oldest living garage band drummer."

Rounding out the band is Sacramento's Geoff Goodman, providing vocals and harmonica.

Sharing the stage with the Roadmasters on Saturday will be Lew Fratis, a graduate of West Sacramento's former James Marshall High School.

"He is going to come in and sit with us," said McGowan. "If people are a Lew fan, they're going to get a lot of Lew. He plays guitar like a demon and sings like an angel."

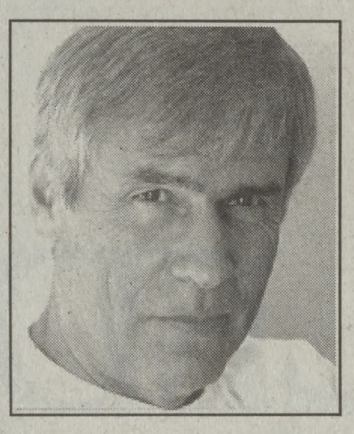
Sometimes it's good to have a bad reputation

Note: Daryl is on vacation this week. Below is one of his favorite columns from the past.

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was sharing a crowded table the other day at the Pot Belly Deli with some people I didn't really know when one of them (he apparently works in West Sacramento but lives on the other side of the river) suddenly pointed to the sweater I was wearing, which had a River City High School emblem on it, and insisted on knowing why I liked living in West Sacramento.

"Oh, lots of reasons," I told him. "To begin with, it's right smack dab in the center of everything. For instance, when I feel like going to the foothills where all that great Gold Rush history is, they're only 30 minutes away. And if I want to spend some time in the high mountains, lovely Lake Tahoe is just a couple of hours up the road. And when I get an urge to be in a big city, the best big city in the world is only a couple of hours down the road. And when I need to be reminded that we human beings aren't really all that important in the overall scheme of things, the giant redwood tree groves are only...."

"No, no, no," the man interrupted me, slowly shaking his yuppie head from side-to-side, "I didn't mean why do you like living in the Sacramento area, I can understand that because I like it here, too. What I really wanted to know is why anyone in their right mind would want to live on this side of the river in West Sacramento?"

"Well," I said as tactfully as I could, "I guess because it's always been home. I was born and raised in West Sacramento. My parents moved here from the Midwest right after my dad returned from World War Two and they bought a little tract home in a placed called Westfield Village, which is over by Westfield Elementary School."

"That's by McDonald's, on West Capitol Avenue, isn't it?" he asked with a surprised expression.

"That's right," I answered.

"So, you grew up right there by West Capitol Avenue, where all those rundown motels are?"

"A few blocks away," I said, "on Michigan Boulevard, if you know where that is."

"Do you know what kind of reputation West Sacramento has over by where I live?" he asked as he took another bite out of his low-fat turkey sandwich, which only had a thin covering of mustard on it because he had apparently heard that deli sandwiches can often be fatal if you throw all caution to the wind and put some mayonnaise on them.

"It wasn't always that way," I assured him. "When I was young, West Capitol Avenue was actually part of the main road that ran between San Francisco and Lake Tahoe. That's why there are so many motels. They used to be filled with really friendly travelers and they were a great place to hang out when I was a kid, especially during the summer."

"Why?"

"Because most of them had a swimming pool and my friends and I would put on our bathing suits, hide our bikes in some nearby bushes, and sneak into them when no one was looking and pretend we were the kids of some of the people who had spent the night. The manager would usually get wise after awhile, but some of them were nice enough to let us keep swimming anyway."

"All I know," said the man with one of the best-looking ties I had ever seen, "is that every time I've driven down West Capitol Avenue, I've felt like I was taking my life into my own hands."

"Really?" I said with a smile, wondering what he would think if he knew I walked or rode my bicycle to the News-Ledger office on West Capitol Avenue most every day.

"I'm serious," he assured me. "And judging from some of the low-lifes I've seen hanging around those motels, you must have a terrible crime problem over here."

As the man continued to harangue me with all the other horrible things he had heard about West Sacramento from people who don't live here, I debated with myself as to whether or not I should waste the last few minutes of my lunch hour trying to tell him the truth; that West Sacramento has thousands of wonderful people living in it; that they can still safely go for leisurely walks in their neighborhoods after the sun goes down; that our schools are a lot less violent and drug-infested than the ones in Sacramento County; that it only takes us five minutes to commute to jobs in Sacramento while everyone else is stuck in traffic mouthing epithets at each other; and best of all, that we have somehow managed to preserve a small-town atmosphere here which once could be found throughout the United States.

West Sacramento has thousands of wonderful people living in it. They can still safely go for leisurely walks in their neighborhoods after the sun goes down. Our schools are a lot less violent and drug-infested than the ones in Sacramento County. And, best of all, we have somehow managed to preserve a small-town atmosphere here which once could be found throughout the United States.

Then, knowing that one of the reasons West Sacramento is still a great place to live is because most of the people who make their home on the other side of the bridge are scared to death to step foot inside our city limits, I put on my most convincing expression, wiped a big glob of mayonnaise from the side of my mouth and said, "Well, I've got to get going. I don't like to leave my truck in a West Sacramento parking lot for too long – vandalism, you know – not to mention that my wife has already had her car stolen twice from the driveway."

He nodded that he understood and I headed back to work, comfortable in the knowledge that I had done my small part to keep the worst element of all out of West Sacramento.

Thought of the Day: Always live your life with enough pizzazz and scandal to raise the eyebrows of others, but not quite enough to warrant an appearance on the Jerry Springer show.

'Stunners' prove stunning

The West Sacramento 'Stunners' of the junior division West Sacramento softball league beat the Rio Linda Impact on Thursday to take the District 6 championships. They stayed undefeated during the entire 'Tournament of Champions,' but had to fight off a surging Rio Linda squad in the final game. A triple-play by the West Sacramento girls clinched the game 9-7.

Part of the triple play to close the game: After Rosalia caught the ball in the outfield, she threw home to Hailey, who made the tag at home plate (above), and Hailey threw to Teresa at third to tag out another runner.

tional Gymnastics Centre, a school for kids.

"This is a very big deal for us," said Vanessa Perez, a member of the gymnastics center's booster club. "It's going to help offset the costs for boy and girl gymnasts. They go to nationals, and they have to travel a lot."

The fireworks booth permit allows the booths to open at noon on June 28, and remain open through Independence Day, July 4.

City officials said they believed that legalizing "safe and sane" fireworks would not be dangerous – and in fact, might allow public safety officials to concentrate on cracking down on the illegal types of fireworks.

Missing from the fireworks ordinance is a restriction on the times of day that fireworks can be set off in local neighborhoods.

"We tried to mirror state law," reported Fire Marshal Jason Rizzi," and "basically, we didn't want to put anything into (the local ordinance) that can't be enforced."

City Councilmember Oscar Villegas, a proponent of allowing "safe and sane" fireworks to be legalized in the city, said the council will review how the new ordinance goes over this year and consider revising it how necessary.

"This is a trial event kind of thing, and we'll have an after-action report and make any adjustments necessary for next year," said Villegas.

Following is a list of the eight West Sacramento organizations permitted to open a fireworks booth. The News-Ledger contacted each of them to ask where their booth would be, and included that information when available. Most or all of the booths will open around noon on June 28:

The booster club for the International Gymnastics Centre will open its booth in the parking lot of Wicked West Pizza, 3170 Jefferson Boulevard in Southport.

The Bryte and Broderick Community Action Committee will partner with other organizations at a booth near Nugget and Target.

The River City Apostolic Christian School will open a booth near Walmart and Ikea.

The River City High School Booster Club will have a fireworks stand in the parking lot of Whitey's Jolly Kone, Jefferson Blvd. at 15th Street.

The West Sacramento Soccer Club will set up its stand near Arteaga's Market, Sacramento Avenue at Kegle Drive.

"Out of the Box" food pantry ministry will be in the Safeway parking lot.

Other groups with fireworks sales permits are the Lighthouse Covenant Church and Our Lady of Grace School. Spokespeople for these organizations didn't respond by press time, but the News-Ledger will add their location information when it becomes available, and post an updated listing at www.news-ledger.com.

TREVOR LANGFORD with Congressman MIKE THOMPSON: Langford is headed ton the U.S. Air Force Academy

Trevor Langford, a 2010 graduate of River City High School, will be inducted into the U.S. Air Force Academy this week. He's the son of Larry and Dani Langford of West Sacramento.

He's the only local grad known to be heading into one of the nation's military academies this year, and the first in recent history to go to the Air Force academy in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

If successful, he'll leave the academy in four years with a bachelor of science degree and a commission as an officer in the Air Force.

About 18,000 people applied for a space at the academy this year, and less than ten percent were accepted.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

Join the 'party of one'

What a mess.

California is in its worst fiscal crisis in many decades, with years of mismanagement coupled with the most severe economic conditions since before World War II.

The state has already made billions of dollars in cuts – but it's not enough.

Organized labor is trying to protect what's left of its often-inflated salaries and pensions, and it's twisting the arms of every Democrat it can find.

Republicans, meanwhile, have caught some sort of flu that makes them think that the best time to attack a deficit (federal or state) is during a recession. Their party has gone from being a responsible watchdog on government spending to something far more irrational, declaring that they want to solve 100 percent of the state's problems with cuts. For most of them, this is cynical posturing. It's impossible to believe most Republican legislators sincerely want to win the battle to balance the budget on cuts alone – not if they have bothered to look at what those cuts will actually do to their districts on a local level. But then, since Republicans are in the minority in the legislature, they can fight this battle with the comfort of knowing there's little danger they will win.

The state is facing two basic options. The first is to make more cuts, balanced by an extension of some tax increases that are already in place (you can call that a "tax increase" if you're so inclined). The second is to make nothing but cuts – cuts twice as deep as in the first option – gutting education and some other important programs, which have already taken a lot of fiscal punches during the recession.

When you look at where all those additional cuts will hit if you choose the "all cuts" option, you'll probably agree it's a bad idea. Most Republicans in the state legislature probably agree, too, even if they can't say so for fear of angering their ideological base.

The two parties have been at loggerheads for months, doing their best to prove that California has indeed become ungovernable.

Meanwhile, the governor himself has been the source actual leadership. He wants the remaining hunk of state deficit to be eliminated – solved – by a budget without gimmicks, without "kicking the can down the road." He wants more cuts, but he wants those cuts to be tempered with tax extensions approved by the voters. This strategy would keep California from shooting its educational and social services in the leg. It's a painful strategy, but a responsible one.

The Republicans, meanwhile, have long been blocking the governor's plan to ask voters what they think about his plan. So nothing has happened.

The Democrats in the legislature are in the majority, and the only party capable of coming up with a budget that met a state deadline (and prevented the legislators of both parties from losing their pay if they were late). So they passed a budget without Republican help – a budget that had – you guessed it – plenty of gimmicks and tricks.

Your Assemblywoman Mariko Yamada noted the proposed budget's shortcomings, but said "passing the budget today sends a signal that we are serious about moving California further along on the road to recovery."

Your State Senator Wolk voted for it as well, but called it "the worst budget I have voted for in my nine years in the Legislature."

The Democratic governor almost instantly vetoed this Democratic monstrosity. Some Democrats found this aggravating and complain about his ability to work with them. They say Brown has become a "party of one."

Now, a lot of people still don't get Jerry Brown. He's socially liberal and he's a Democrat. In the past has been a bit out of focus as a leader. In the 1970s, he was famously christened "Governor Moonbeam" for some of his "pie in the sky" idealism.

He may be a lot of things, but what he is not, at this point in his career, is the simple "tax-and-spend liberal" some claim.

Brown is old enough that he is no longer worried about making another presidential run. He's got lots of government experience. And he has promised to get California's fiscal house in order, now. Brown is less beholden to special interests at this point than most of the folks in the legislature, and that makes him more able to chart a common-sense course. As Brown well knows, how well he solves California's budget crisis is what he'll be graded on as he nears the end of his political career.

All this, in fact, makes him the right man for this almost-impossible job of governing California.

There's still room for negotiation in the state budget, but not for posturing, politicking or gamesmanship. Not now, when California is on the brink.

Our house is on fire. Governor Brown is trying to lead. For goodness sake, let's follow the guy out through the smoke.

Hints For Homeowners

Sewage In The House? Who Pays For The Cleanup?

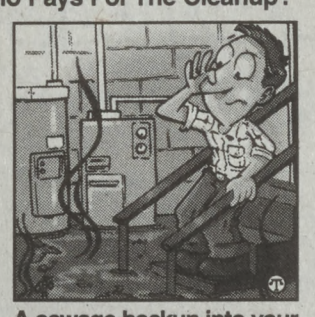
(NAPS)—It's a homeowner's nightmare: sewer backup. Your life is suddenly turned upside down. Everything else on your personal agenda must be thrust aside while you deal with the unwelcome flow.

Often its consequences include thousands of dollars in damage and an unlivable house. All too frequently the cause is a blockage in the municipal sanitary main.

"Many cities and states have laws granting them governmental immunity from reimbursing homeowners for city-caused sewer backup damage into residents' homes," says Robin K. Olson, CPCU, senior research analyst for the International Risk Management Institute. "And even if your city doesn't have total immunity, it might limit the damages it's willing to pay."

For example, it might pay only if it knew of the problem in advance and had a reasonable amount of time to correct it. If the homeowner's tree roots were a partial cause of the backup, the city might pay only a portion of the remediation costs. Typically, homeowners are responsible for maintaining the pipeline from the house to the city sewer main. Further, some places set a maximum figure that they will pay, such as $5,000 or $10,000, that might be wholly inadequate to clean up the mess.

On top of that, homeowners' insurance policies usually do not cover such damage.



A sewage backup into your basement may be only the beginning of your troubles—but you can protect yourself from the cost.

"There is a solution," says Olson. "Homeowners should purchase an 'endorsement' to their policy specifically covering such a loss to at least $50,000, including water damage, remediation and cleanup costs."

In addition, there are a few steps you or a professional cleaner can take:

- Wet vac up all the liquid.
- Scoop up all the solids.
- Throw away anything not valuable.
- Cut out soaked drywall and paneling.
- Pressure wash everything with a disinfectant detergent.
- Rinse, then vacuum up all the remaining water.
- Set up fans to dry out the basement.

For expert advice on the insurance, homeowners can consult an agent or broker holding the CPCU designation—assuring experience, advanced professional education and a commitment to high ethical standards.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Of Gods and Men" (R) -- This French import has been collecting awards and nominations for the past few months as the critics' new favorite foreign-language film. It's a quiet, thoughtful movie about Trappist monks in Algeria who are faced with a dilemma as fundamentalist violence reaches their peaceful village.

It's easy to see why the film is such a hit with the critics -- like the monks, the movie is slow, contemplative and devoted to its vision. The modest day-to-day lives of the monks reveal a quiet compassion and firm faith. This slow pace tacitly takes on different tones as the conflicts of the outside world close in.

The R-rating comes as a surprise. There is only one brief scene of violence, and absolutely no danger of a child seeing it since no child can make it through the first 20 minutes of this beautiful, snail-slow movie about the challenges of the faithful.

"Hobo with a Shotgun" (R) -- This deranged circus of gore and bad language is a treat for fans of ultra-violence and 1970s exploitation films. That statement should be sufficient warning for those with high taste, because that's as mild as it can be put. "Hobo with a Shotgun" is more accurately described as a blood-fueled roller-coaster ride through a riot of craven psychopaths turning to each other for entertainment.

The movie starts with the titular vagrant (Rutger Hauer) arriving in Scumtown, a city controlled by a sadistic criminal family. Disgusted by the violence and inhumanity he sees in the streets, a lone drifter becomes the only one to take a stand.

The quality of the movie shows throughout, so even as it drives off the cliff of good taste -- rolling and burning in the valley below -- you can tell that somebody really cared about the color palette and art direction for this horrific spectacle.

"Crack in the World" [Blu-ray] (NR) -- If you need a reminder that today's overblown disaster-adventure movies have a rich and storied ancestry, turn to this flick from 1965. It's a fine specimen of a breed that had to keep the tension going without the aid of computer graphics. When Dr. Stephen Sorenson (Dana Andrews) goes forward with a risky plan to harness energy from the earth's core, his hubris triggers a split in the planet's crust -- one that threatens to tear the world wide open! It's a premise so silly that it could be remade any day now!

Indeed, this movie is wonderful proof that cheeseball science-disaster movies were pretty well figured out a good while ago. The story keeps a steady pace of drama, science and explosions. It's recommended for fans of disaster movies, or anyone who needs to prove to a young person that exciting old movies do exist.

"The Last Gunfight: The Real Story of the Shootout at the O.K. Corral – and How It Changed the American West" by Jeff Guinn (Simon & Schuster, $27)

Reviewed by Larry Cox

The shootout in Tombstone, Ariz., on a crisp October day in 1881 is one of the most sensational events in the history of the American West. Although dozens of books have been written about the shootout, much of what we think we know about it is simply not true. For starters, the gunfight didn't happen in the enclosure of the O.K. Corral, but rather at a vacant lot on nearby Fremont Street. More to the point, the event was simply an arrest gone wrong.

Jeff Guinn, a former investigative journalist and award-winning author, serves up a riveting narrative that provides a new take on both the gunfight and the people involved.

According to Guinn, Wyatt Earp was a much more complex man than many historians have assumed. He was arrested for horse theft when he was a young man and broke out of jail while awaiting trial. He worked as a pimp in many of the river towns in Illinois. Later, during his sporadic service as a police officer and deputy marshal in Kansas and Arizona, he remained technically a fugitive from the law. He was never a full sheriff.

Guinn is convinced that in the confusion of the shootout, Wyatt shot and seriously wounded his brother Morgan. He backs up this theory using Wyatt's own diagram of the battle -- a diagram included in the book.

The gunfight became in pivotal moment in Western history because, according to Guinn, the "misunderstandings, exaggerations and outright lies about it provided impetus for future generations to form a skewed, one-dimensional view of history." He adds that the event represented an unintentional, if inevitable, clash between evolving social, political and economic forces, though the Earps, Clantons, McLaurys and Doc Holiday had no notion of that when they began pulling triggers.

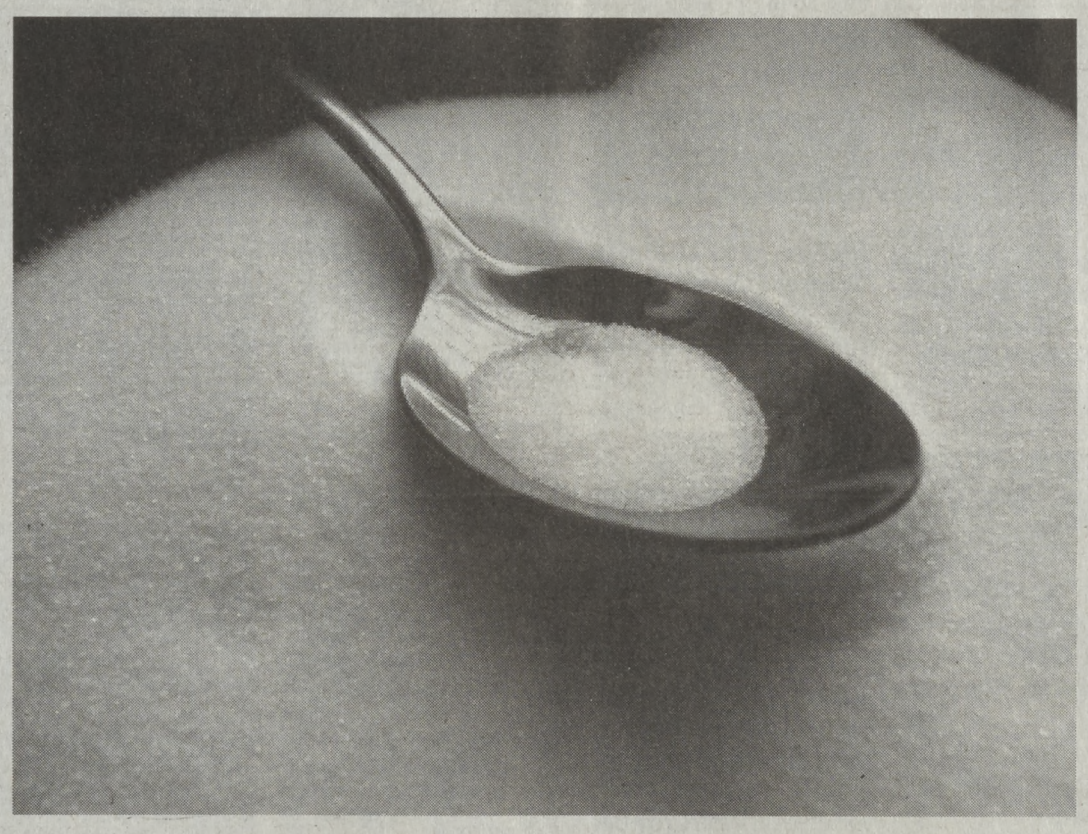
The Kitchen Diva

BY Angela Shelf Medearis



Naturally Sweet

My sister, Marcia, loves to garden. She generously shares her plants with me. Recently, she gave me a stevia plant as a gift. I use the leaves of this naturally sweet herb to sweeten a variety of drinks. It's also available commercially in a granular form like sugar.

Stevia is a not-so-new sweetener that recently made its way into the U.S. market. Although Stevia has been sold in the U.S. for many years as a dietary supplement, it was not regulated by the Food and Drug Administration. Now that the FDA has declared its active ingredient -- rebaudioside A -- as "generally accepted as safe," it is showing up in products like tabletop sweetener packets. PureVia (from PepsiCo and a subsidiary of Merisant, Whole Earth Sweeteners) and Truvia (from Coca-Cola and Cargill), along with some flavored waters and lower-calorie soda and fruit drinks, now contain stevia.

Leaves from the stevia plant are steeped in water and then processed into crystalline form. These crystals create a sweet taste in the mouth, but are calorie-free when digested. As a sweetener, stevia's extract is 250 to 300 times sweeter than sugar. This means only a very tiny amount is needed to add sweetness to a food or beverage.

As with any sweetener, there are challenges to using stevia in food products. Stevia is naturally bitter, but tastes sweet after some delay. Although it is temperature and acid stable, the natural bitterness and intense sweetness are challenges the food industry will have to overcome. Consumers will need to taste stevia and decide for themselves how well they like it.

Another possible challenge is the price. Currently, it is expensive to use stevia or its active ingredient in foods. Products containing this naturally derived sweetener may be out of many consumers' price range.

Like other sugar substitutes, consumers need to watch for any warnings or concerns with stevia. It has been classified as safe, but it doesn't hurt to try it out slowly to see what effect it has on individual taste and digestion.

This recipe for Fruit Sorbet uses stevia instead of sugar to sweeten the dessert.

FRUIT SORBET

You'll need an ice cream machine for this delicious recipe. You can use any fruit juice blend concentrate of your choice instead of raspberry. This recipe also works well if you substitute one (12.3 ounce) box of silken tofu for the yogurt, along with 1 cup of milk or soymilk.

2 cups plain low-fat yogurt
1/4 cup milk
1/2 cup unsweetened raspberry juice blend concentrate, thawed
1 tablespoon orange juice concentrate
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3/4 teaspoon stevia sugar substitute
1 banana (optional)

Blend all ingredients together in a blender until smooth. Pour into the container of an ice-cream machine, and process according to directions. Makes 4 servings.
